Six Quit Belgian Coalition

Early Elections Possible; Martens Consults King

The Associated Press BRUSSELS — Deputy Prime Minister Jean Gol and five other cabinet members from his party resigned Monday, a move that could bring down the coalition gov-emment of Prime Minister Wil-

"The logical consequence of this solidarity is resignation," Mr. Mi-

Belga, the Belgian national news agency, reported that Mr. Martens had gone to the Royal Palace Monday night for an emergency meet-ing with King Baudouin and that a cabinet meeting would be held Tuesday.

The withdrawal of the six cabinet members from Mr. Martens's coalition of Christian Democrats and conservatives could force an early general election. Regular elections were scheduled for Dec. 8.

The coalition took office in 1981. Mr. Gol, the most prominent French-speaking conservative in the government, submitted his resignation to protest the refusal of the interior minister, Charles-Ferdinand Nothomb, to resign after the Brussels soccer stadium riot in which 38 persons died in May. The interior minister, a Christian Democrat, is in charge of the police. Mr. Gol, 43, who is also justice inister, offered a letter containing his resignation to Mr. Martens, who relayed it to King Baudouin.

A brief statement from the Royal Palace said the king "holds this resignation in suspension." It did not elaborate.

Mr. Gol is one of three deputy prime ministers.

His move came two days after a parliamentary debate on the gov-ernment's handling of the May 29 riot at the European Cup soccer final between Liverpool and Juventus of Turin, Mr. Gol and other members of his party called for Mr. Nothomb to resign.

Mr. Nothomb, also a deputy has been more rain in Daniu times prime minister, refused to quit, and in all of last year, according to Mr. Martens won a 109-3 vote of reports received by the European Community. Suicide Blast Kills 10 Near

Israeli Zone

TEL AVIV - A suicide bombladen automobile bearing Red Cross markings was blown up by its driver at the edge of the Israeli security zone in southern Lebanon on Monday, killing seven Lebanese civilians, two militiamen of Israelibacked forces and the driver, Israeli media and military sources said. In Beirut, artillery and gun battles killed four persons on Monday after Walid Jumblat, leader of the leftist Druze Moslems, vowed to fight unto death" to remove President Amin Gemayel. The car carrying the bomb was a Peugeot 504 with one person in-side, sources said. It expleded near the village of Tibnit, five miles (eight kilometers) north of the Israeli border, at a checkpoint leading into a buffer zone that is patrolled by Israeli-backed militiamen of the South Lebanon Army, the sources said. The explosion occurred on the road linking the headquarters of the South Lebanon Army in the Christian town of Marjayoun with the Moslem Shiite town of Nabatiyeh outside the security zone. After two suicide-bomb attacks on July 9, the South Lebanon Army closed off the four crossing points linking the security zone with other Eparts of Lebanon, But on Monday the pedestrian crossing at Ras al-Bayada on the Mediterranean coast was re-opened. Israel radio reported.

Israel withdrew most its troops from Lebanon a month ago but left behind some soldiers, primarily to act as liaison and back-up for the 2,000-member South Lebanon

Mr. Jumblat's threat and the battles in and around Beirut came in spite of the arrival on Sunday of Syrian military officers to oversee the disarmament of Moslem militias in West Beirut and at Beirut International Airport.
Prime Minister Rashid Karami

said a new plan to end anarchy in West Beirut and its airport would be implemented at 6 A.M. Tuesday when a newly formed elite army force takes "positions assigned to it in the capital."

The force consists of 300 Lebanese Army soldiers who will oversee the closing of militia offices in the Moslem sector and end their quested anonymity.

Referring to President Gemayel and his Christian Phalange Party, Mr. Jumblat, the transport and tourist minister in the unity government, said: "It's either they kill us or we kill them."

BONN — For years, Kurt Behrens was regarded by Hughes Hehcopter Inc. as one of its most successful foreign distributors. Even when buyers seemed scarce, the gregarious Dane and his West German firm, Delta-Avia Fluggerate GmbH, was getting impressive or-ders around the world.

When a deep recession afflicted the aircraft industry in 1983, Mr. Behrens was still going strong. He received orders for nearly a hundred Model 500D and 500E civilian helicopters, virtually all of Hughes's production run at the time. He refused to disclose the final destination of the aircraft, JOHANNESBURG - For most of his adult life Joe Slovo, the white Marxist and former Johannesburg lawyer who has been trying for a generation to overthrow the white-minority government of South Africa, has been on the run.

As a militant protest organizer he endured a before fleeing in 1963. Since then he has conducted a campaign of violent sabotage from exile as a top military official of the outlawed African National Congress. He has survived assassination attempts, the murder of his wife, the South African academic Ruth First, and his own expulsion last year from Mozambique, where he had operated for a half-dozen years.

To the South African government Mr. Slovo, 58, is Public Enemy No. 1, the evil mastermind directing a crusade of terrorism and murder and manipulating blacks inside his movement with a script written in Moscow. To many of the government's foes he is a hero, and his late wife, a Recently Mr. Slovo, an architect of the revoationary movement's sabotage campaign, decided to break precedent and speak out publicly. In a three-hour interview at a clandestine location he derided the present "reforms" advocated by the South African government and decade of legal harassment inside South Africa reaffirmed his movement's commitment to generation of white opponents of apartheid, of armed struggle as the only way to compel real Mr. Slove also confirmed publicly for the first time that as chief of staff of the group's secret military wing, Umkhonto we Sizwe — Spear of the Nation," in Zulu — he had been involved in planning the various bombings of government buildings and strategic installations that have killed more than two dozen people and shaken South Africa for five years.

Above all, Mr. Slovo stressed that despite the African National Congress's recent setbacks in Mozambique and Swaziland, where the movement's operations have virtually been shut down, he viewed South Africa as moving slowly but inexorably toward a major upheaval.

In "Burger's Daughter," the South African novelist Nadine Gordiner writes that "Communists are the world's last optimists." So it is with tion that seeks its demise. There have been Mr. Slovo. He says he believes that the next five voices urging the government toward fundayears could mark the breaking point for white mental change before time runs out, and there rule, and he clings to the idea that a single, well-

Asked if he expected to return in his lifetime as a free man to a black-ruled South Africa, Mr.

Slovo replied, "Absolutely yes."

Mr. Slovo's story, along with that of his late wife, is a long-running drama of resistance to white rule. But it is also a story of a lost people who surrendered and scorned the many privileges white society bestowed on them. Miss First and Mr. Slovo were two of the leading white intellectuals who seemed to dominate the freedom movement in the 1950s. Before she was prohibited from writing or speaking publicly, Miss First was responsible for journalistic exposes of some of the crueler aspects of the apartheid system. Mr. Slovo was a co-author of the Freedom Charter, the ringing 1955 docu-ment that many hope may someday serve as South Africa's declaration of independence.

Mr. Slovo says they worked hand in hand with black leaders such as Nelson Mandela, now jailed for life, and the late Albert Luthuli, president of the African National Congress and a Nobel Peace Prize winner. But others contend that communists like Mr. Slovo and Miss First became obstacles, pushing the movement toward a prearranged goal.

Baker 3d, who exchanged jobs with Mr. Regan last January, emerged as the dominant figure in the White House after the president, But Mr. Baker was part of a triumvirate and shared power with longtime Rea-gan aides who had access to the president and considerable leverage within the White House. Mr. Regan, in contrast, faces no rivals for the president's ear. And even before the illness, he made it plain to the senior White House staff and administration officials that he largely controlled access to Mr. Reagan.

In cementing his power in the White House, Mr. Regan has brought in several aides from the Treasury Department. They have assumed central roles and, to some degree, have rankled a number of key White House officials.

One official brought in by Mr. Regan, Alfred H. Kingon, who is the cabinet secretary and a deputy assistant to the president, is now assuming more control over domestic policy matters, White House officials said. In the process, Mr. Kingon and John A. Svahn, a long-time aide to Mr. Reagan who is the assistant to the president for policy

Colon Cancer a Problem in Rich Nations

By Susan Okie

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — Industrialized countries are experiencing what one expert terms a "preventable epidemic" of colon cancer and American specialists hope that President Ronald Reagan's surgery will spur the public to learn more about how to prevent the often-fatal disease.

Colon cancer, which many experts link to diet, is second only to lung cancer in frequency and as a cause of cancer death in the United States. An estimated 138,000 new cases will be diagnosed during 1985, and 60,000 Americans will die of the disorder.

In Europe, the incidence of colon cancer is similar to U.S. rates. The disease ranks second in cancer incidence among males in Europe and in some Latin American countries, and between third and fourth in females. Incidence is much lower in Asia and Africa.

A white male in the United States has a 6.3 percent chance of developing colon or rectal cancer, and a white female a 6.8 percent chance.

About half of those who get the disease die of it.

The large intestine is able to contain a slowly growing tumor within its walls for many years, making colon cancer one of the most curable of malignancies if it is detected before the growth breaches the intestinal wall. Yet the intestine also hides tumors effectively. "The colon is kind of a dumb organ. All it

Other evidence indicates that eating a diet high in fat raises risk of colon and rectal cancer, perhaps by stimulating the production of bile acids, important in digesting far. These acids may be converted by colonic bacteria into canpromoting substances.

If bile acids do contribute to cancer formation, fiber may counteract their influence by changing the population of bacteria that live in the colon, Dr. Ziegler said.

U.S. Court Asked to Review Abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration asked the U.S. Supreme Court on Monday to overturn its landmark 1973 decision

The Justice Department argued in a friend-of-the-court brief filed in connection with two pending cases in Illinois and Pennsylvania that states must be allowed to place some restrictions on the performance of abortions. The brief noted that in the 1973 decision of Roe v. Wade, the court held that the right of privacy emanating from the due process clause of the constitution was "broad enough to encompass a woman's decision whether or not to terminate her pregnancy." But it also said that the courts repeatedly failed to protect the life and health of the woman and the child subject to abortion.

Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, said that President Ronald Reagan had approved the filing of the brief.

Voyager-2 Approaches Uranus

Spacecraft Preparing for Close Encounter in January

By John Noble Wilford PASADENA, California - The

Voyager-2 spacecraft, now seven years and 1.5 billion miles away from Earth, is fast approaching Uranns and already transmitting occasional television pictures. So far, however, the transmissions tell more about the hardy craft than the distant planet.

They demonstrate that Voyager-2 has survived its long journey, past Jupiter in 1979 and past Saturn in 1981, and is on course to fly within 66,000 miles (106,000 kilometers) of Uranus in January, officials at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here have said. The spacecraft is 165 million miles from Uranus and traveling toward it at 40,000 miles

In the pictures from Voyager-2, Uranus still looks more like a fuzzy tennis ball than the third largest planet in the solar system. Uranus is a gaseous body roughly four times the size of Earth. The color is a pale greenish-blue. No distinct features, either surface splotches or any bands of differing hoes, are yet-

"We do not see any of the banded detail we saw at Jupiter and Saturn," said Ellis D. Miner, the deputy project scientist, in a recent interview. "We should see it by now, if there is the same level of banding. Uranus may be very vealed no significant degradation tional prope bland. It may look more like the in performance since it flew by Sat- to 16 hours.

cloudy Venus than the more spec- urn. That was 800 million miles tacular Jupiter or Saturn."

Scientists are awaiting a more detailed look when Voyager-2 makes its closest approach to the planet on Jan. 24. Flight engineers are preparing to make the encoun-ter as scientifically productive as possible, given the condition of the aging spacecraft and the great distance the data must travel.

. By the time Voyager-2 reaches Uranus, the spacecraft will be 1.8 billion miles from Earth. At that distance, a radio signal takes two hours and 45 minutes to arrive at tracking antennas, and it is a weak To pick the faint signals out of the sky, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has de-veloped a means of enhancing the "hearing" of its deep-space anten-Flight controllers have also changed the configuration of a computer on the spacecraft to compress the data for each picture so that about three times as many pic-tures can be transmitted in the critical hours of encounter. Thus, even at the slow transmission rates over the distance from Uranus, Voyager-2 should be able to send about 200 images a day. George Textor, the mission director, said that calibration of instruments on Voyager-2 has re-vealed no significant degradation

Two problems that arose at Saturn still plague the craft. The main radio receiver is out of service, and the back-up is so sensitive to temperature changes that it sometime has trouble locking on to Earth signals. In addition, the movable platform holding the camera and several remote-sensing instruments tend to stick as a result of a lubri-

Observations of Uranus are to begin in earnest on Nov. 4. Voyag-er-2 will be commanded to take a picture every five minutes over 36 hours and then repeat the picture-taking sequence on a regular basis. From these pictures, scientists hope to produce a movie of the planet's atmospheric dynamics.

By tracking any distinct features in the atmosphere, Mr. Miner said, the Voyager-2 movies should answer a basic question: How long is a Uranian day? Earth-based mea-surements indicate that it is either models based on the planet's rota-longer dominates the market and is short of cash. The OPEC cartel is currently trying to keep the price of oil higher than customers need to pay, but is unwilling to make the production cuts that this would require. Its July 5-7 meeting in Vienna did little except fix a date to meet again - a common outcome at intergovernmental conferences.

The current weakness of OPEC is hardly surprising. Six years ago it was supplying 60 percent of the non-Communist world's needs; now it is down to 30 percent. Supply from the North Sea has risen. And demand for oil has fallen because it is being replaced by other types of energy and the world is using energy more sparingly.

It is easy - and unprofitable - to laugh at the disarray of a once powerful body. What is needed is better cooperation between consumers and producers so that the energy market works more to the advantage of world prosperity than in the last 15 years when adversarial attitudes prevailed. Energy is one of the few areas in which the market, left to itself, may not produce optimal results, so costly are the decisions that have to be made and so slow the arrival of profits.

Unfortunately, the main consumers of oil, meeting at the International Energy Agency (IEA) only a couple of days after the OPEC debacle, dismissed the idea of negotiating with the ailing cartel. This refusal would be appropriate if developments in the oil market were destined indefinitely to favor the big importers. But are they?

Falling oil prices will not bring unalloyed joy to the world, any more than the two brutal price increases did. The immediate effect, at best, would be to replace one set of

The way of a cartel is hard when it no extreme debtors — the non-oil developing countries - with another, as Nigeria, Mexico and Venezuela faced bankruptcy. And declining fortunes in the OPEC world would exacerbate rather than ease political problems in the Middle East.

Above all, the industrialized world has to look ahead to assess the probability of new oil shocks that would again force prices up and impede recovery across the world. Economists at the OECD estimate that the moderate recovery hoped for in the next three years will not force oil prices up faster than other prices. If anything, the real price of oil may even fall slightly. But this analysis intentionally slides over the possibility of new political interruptions in the flow of oil, which can neither be forecast nor ruled out.

What happens then? The world economy will, hopefully, be expanding reasonably fast as we move into the 1990s. Energy demand will rise accordingly, but oil pro-duction outside OPEC may have peaked. Leading analysts see a fairly steady increase in Europe's OPEC imports in the next 20 years. The IEA itself has underlined the likelihood of a tighter energy market in the '90s. Can we be sure that in the immediately intervening years weak prices for OPEC oil will not distract the world from its present efforts to solve its energy problems? The confusing fact is that too low an oil price today may increase the risk of another major rise tomorrow. The unfortunate fact is that neither OPEC nor the IEA seems prepared for talks, although the fortunes of both blocs are inextricably linked. It is time to break down the antagonisms of the last 15 years and solve this enigma together.

Confusing Southern Africa

The State Department touts the idea that American policy in southern Africa should be based on consensus, but administration policy is being shredded in political debate.

In the central challenge, the Republican Senate has now followed the Democratic House in approving economic sanctions. Congress did it as much to protest administration attempts to practice quiet persuasion on the South African government as to protest the white minority regime's practice of apartheid. There is much doubt in Congress that sanctions will do other than stiffen whites and inflict further hardship on blacks, but there is broad dislike for what is seen as administra-tion tiptoeing on apartheid. The Pretoria regime's harsh and continuing reprisals against citizens and neighbors suggest that it is thumbing its nose at Ronald Reagan and at America.

This is what Congress is voting against. Nor are sanctions the end of it. The other day the House followed the Senate in voting to lift the 10-year legislative bar on aiding insurgents in Marxist-ruled Angola.

A Congress traumatized by Vietnam had cut off, through the Clark amendment, covert aid to a favored Angolan faction vying to take over from the departing Portuguese. No president since has approved of this congressional shackle on executive discretion. The Reagan State Department has complained that the amendment enacted the Brezhnev doctrine which holds that a Communist revolution is irreversible - into American law. But the main line of policy has assumed that the Clark amendment would stay on the books.

Here again, however, congressional impatience made its mark. Conservatives have long had a fascination with Jonas Savimbi and his UNITA insurgents, who are supported by South Africa. More recently some liberals have sought to show that they, too, are tough and anti-Communist. Thus has the administra-tion's policy of encouraging anti-Communist resistance movements, in Nicaragua and Af-ghanistan, caught on in Congress for causes— in Cambodia and now Angola—for which the president has not been out in front.

Some parliamentary hurdles to repeal of the Clark amendment still stand. The administration professes to have no plans to exploit a renewed legal opportunity to aid Savimbi in-surgents. But in this moment of passage in southern Africa it is extremely mischievous to revive even the possibility that Washington may get back into regional military intervention. Angola's immediate decision to break off talks with the United States on Cuban troop withdrawal underlines the point. There is yet another place in which Congress is trampling on the intended subtleties of the Reagan policy of "constructive engagement" with all of the different countries of southern Africa. The House voted limits on development aid to Mozambique, a country that the administration has been carefully trying to draw out of the Marxist fold. The White House objects strongly to intru-sions on its policy such as the congressional sanctions votes. It would do better to object even more strongly to what goes on in South Africa. In defending its policy it has too often seemed to be defending apartheid. That is the principal reason why its policy is losing ground in Washington and in southern Africa alike.

Pulling Out the Stops for Africa A Bird's Eye on Public Figures

For once the hyperbole of the pop music industry was justified. The 16-hour concert organized by pop stars to raise money for the victims of famine in Africa was truly rock's finest hour. An industry which has rarely set an example to its fans, which in the past has displayed venality, greed and corruption, put on a show at Wembley and Philadelphia on Saturday that was wholly admirable.

Famine in Africa retains all its magnitude, even after a grandiose show that has moved parishioners of the well-off world in a communion service via satellite to the accompaniment of the great organ of show biz. The complaint of the Sahel's children tops the hit parade. - Le Monde (Paris).

What's the story behind Punk, the Penguin? In Australia when I first started cartooning I worked for a very conservative paper. They didn't give me much leeway. So I employed this little bird as an aside. He became popular, took over. Now I couldn't drop it if I wanted to. I've used him for about 30 years. Sometimes he's an alter ego and sometimes you want to say more in a cartoon. It's good for all sorts of things, sometimes just pantomime . . .

1910: A Call to Abolish U.S. Football BOSTON - Dr. David Starr Jordan, President of Leland Stanford University, declared [on July 5] before the American Educational Association that football as played by the athletes of American universities is a combination of the elements of pure brutality and pugilism. "Some day," said Dr. Jordan, "the college presidents and school heads of this country will perhaps be called brutal because they did not put a stop to the dangers of football, a sport that destroys the best there is in American youth. No intelligence is required. Blacksmiths and boilermakers can play the game as well as men of finer intellect, in fact placksmiths and boilermakers are considered the best raw material for the game," Dr. Jordan favored the abolition of football as played and the substitution of the English game.

1935: Jews Targeted in Berlin Riots BERLIN — Fifty detachments of special police guarded several restaurants frequented by foreigners [on July 15] after violent anti-Jewish demonstrations had broken out along the Kurfürstendamm, in the center of Berlin. The Bristol Café was partly wrecked, all the win-dows being smashed and hundreds of tables and chairs being overturned. In another large case, the Jewish proprietor was caned and a young woman employee was knocked unconscious by a stone. The riots apparently started in front of a motion-picture theater where an anti-Jewish film was being shown. A Nazi militiaman bumped into a Jew on the sidewalk and was arrested. An indignant crowd, rapidly growing to more than 2,000, quickly gathered outside the police station, yelling demands to free the Nazi, who was finally released.

 Elections are the cause around which Chileans are most likely to and opposition groups almost always combined to elect their candidates, usually Christian Democrats.

There is no question that General Pinochet would lose a plebiscite on whether to continue the dictatorship by mass mobilization, nonviolen resistance and perhaps a national strike—that a popular referendum is preferable to endless repression.

What can the United States do to support democratic change? The lift-The general will not voluntarily negotiate a transition to democracy. to gross violators of human rights. If Washington were serious about promoting a return to democracy, it would make full use of economic leverage to press for broader civil liberties. Chileans still resent the Nixon administration's commitment to rescue them from their "irresponsibility" after they elected a socialist president, Salvador Allende, in 1970.
They are puzzled by the Reagan administration's insistence that the destiny of Chile is in "good hands."
The restoration of democracy may be months or even years away, but the opposition is now building to-ward that day. The United States should unambiguously support these efforts. The longer General Pinochet remains in power, the greater will be the suffering of the Chilean people and the likelihood of polarization and civil strife. Being soft on General Pinochet is not only morally indefen-sible, it is shortsighted politics.

campaign, which was based on the premise of a vast moral gulf between American government and the good, decent, etc. American people. In Washington, anti-Washington feeling is now standard. It goes by the name of populism tives vie for its mantle. Everyone is anti-institutional, anti-bureaucratic. No one talks anymore of government programs. But since everyone knows that government has to intervene in a complex society, new, disguised means have to be devised. Hence the 1980s' singular obsession with taxes, the supreme instrument for interven-ing with a hidden hand. Invisible government — the next best thing to no government at all.

It is not just Washington that plays the populist tune. Exploiting the distinction between peo-ple (good) and government (bad) has always been a favorite activity abroad. Robert Trautmann, who was a TWA hostage, reported on his jailers' view of America: "They like the people ... It is the government they object to." Terrorists, totalitarians and others with not an inkling of what democracy is about invariably declare themselves friends of the American people and at war with the American government.

This dichotomy denies the central premise of democracy: that when people choose their government the result is anthentically representative of the people. We should perhaps not expect from terrorists too deep a grasp of democratic theory. Rambo, too, an apparent aphasia victim, can be excused. The rest of us have no excuses.

The appeal of anti-institutionalism, whether it takes the form of individualism or of populism, is no doubt strong. It can, however, take us only so far: up to the point where we discover that, in a

Turbulence Coming Up. For France

The state of the s

By Flora Lewis

DARIS - There was a downpour in the middle of the traditional military parade this Bastille Day, a symbol perhaps of the muddle ahead for France's Fifth Republic.

Before next year's national holiday there is almost sure to be a constitutional crisis. Politicians are doing all they can to foreclose available solutions. They don't want to make things worse, but that is the effect of the maneuvering for next spring's parlia-mentary elections, with the 1988 presidential vote in the background.

There is greater underlying consensus in France on major policies than there has been in decades, but the leaders and the partice have developed such an intricate pattern of rivalry that no figure is in a position to embody the basic national view.

The central problem is that the constitution, hand-tail-red for the outsized Charles de Gaulle, draws no clear line between the powers of the National Assembly and those of the president, but gives them different terms, five years for the legislators and seven for the president.

Until now the president's supporters have always controlled the As-sembly, so the dilemma was never faced. No one doubts that President François Mitterrand's Socialists will lose their absolute majority next year, They will do well to win a quarter of the seats. Elsewhere that would make a coalition government inevitable and the big question would be about how to cut the deal.

There are people Mr. Mitterrand ould choose as prime minister with whom he could probably work and who probably could have patched together enough blocs to hold the legislature. That has been made far more difficult by a reform reintroducing proportional representation instead of the current two-round, singlemember constituency system. Pro-portional representation enhances the power of the established party apparatuses that draw up the lists, leaving less room for mavericks.

Mr. Mitterrand has made clear that he does not intend to resign, as some in the opposition demand. But he has come down on the side of the Socialist Party's tough-minded secretary, Lionel Jospin, in a recent quar-rel with Prime Minister Laurent Fabius about running the campaign. Mr. Fabius wanted a strategy of opening toward the center, which would make a future coalition easier. Mr. Jospin argued that this would weaken the party's inner structure and that it would be better to be driven into opposition for a time. The Communists, who were the Socialists' initial partners but are now their allout detractors, say this is planning for defeat. For once they are right.

It is hard to see how Mr. Mitter-It is hard to see now Mr. Mutter-rand intends to govern when his own party is in opposition to his ministers. He could, in de Gaulle's contemptastate, resign himself to "inaugurating chrysauthemums." But that is not Mr. Mitterrand's style at all.

He says now that trying to remove foreign policy from supreme presi-dential decisions would amount "to a coup d'état." Since most key issues, including economic and military policy, involve foreign partners and allies, that means insisting on about as much power as de Gaulle wielded. The French have devised the provocative term "cohabitation" for the prospect of power-sharing between a president and a prime minister from opposing parties. Two of the major-leaders against Mr. Mitterrand, for-mer President Valery Giscard d'Es-taing and former Prime Minister Jac-ques Chirac, say they would accept, but only on their terms, which pro-vide for dismantling much of what the Socialists have done since 1981. The third and most popular oppo-sition leader, former Prime Minister Raymond Barre, says he will not cohabit. All three are positioning themselves to run for president, so each is more concerned with highlighting his own profile as an effective leader than in making government work.

There is lot of fervent talk about the ideal versus the menace of socialism and the virtues versus the vices of capitalism. But that is not what the fight is about. It is about the government's sorry economic record and about personal ambitions. The first is obvious and the second are boring to the public, so there isn't an atmosphere of general tension. The electorate is not worked up yet.

Nonetheless, the crisis is coming and it is going to make France even more than usually difficult to deal with. The Fifth Republic, founded by de Gaulle in 1958, seemed to have taken firm root and demonstrated stability when for the first time power was transferred smoothly to the op-position in 1981. But the hidden flaw was lurking. It is what comes of making a constitution to fit a man.

stitution, dealing with a president's inability to function, was ratified by the states 20 years ago. The main purpose of its third section, setting forth the method a president should use to devolve his power temporarily upon the vice president, is plain: to provide unbroken decision-making power, so that nobody will be tempted by the prospect of retaliatory paralysis to launch a nuclear strike.

Other decisions can be postponed a day or a week; no need exists for a formal transfer of power in an emergency. In practical terms, the main reason for that addition to America's fundamental law is to advertise an ability to respond immediately.

This section was tailor-made for the situation that confronted the president and his legal advisers last week. A president, in full possession of mental and physical faculties, decided to go ahead with a major operation. The whole world knew, as it should, the time of the operation and the approximate length of time the president would be unconscious. That was the time of danger that Section 3 was created to avert.
What did this president do? In a moment calling for absolute clarity, he acted with deliberate fuzziness;

rather than clothe the nation in the newest armor of the Constitution, he

Why this legalistic flimflam? One

He followed the law's procedures but challenged its premises. In the letter to Congress prepared for him by his uncertain legal trumpeters, he properly declared his anticipated in-ability to discharge his powers and duties, but then wrote of "the uncertainties of [the law's] application to such brief and temporary periods of incapacity," and concluded: "I do not believe that the drafters of this amendment intended its application to situations such as the instant one."

spokesman, asked if the vice president had become acting president, the title used in the amendment, was left twisting in the wind. He would not answer, thus refusing on behalf of the president and his legal advisers to reason that will be put forward is that he did not want to unduly alarm anyone - as if cutting out a third of your large intestine to avert cancer were not alarming, or that following the Constitution would be alarming. Another specious excuse for this constitutional myopia is that any brief transfer of power during a major operation would lead to trivial demands for such transfers during dental work or afternoon naps. That is pure nonsense; the Kremlin need not be notified when the president plans to have a tooth pulled.

Underlying President Reagan's fear of admitting his requirement to obey Section 3 in an emergency, I think, is the fear of having to deal with its pressure to declare in-ability for a longer period. Someday a president will be faced with a debilitating physical or mental ailment, and will be tempted by an option that is short of resignation.

Digging one layer below that, in seeking the motive for last week's curious refusal to admit precedent. we find the inherent threat to presidents of Section 4: the involuntary removal of an incapacitated executive by his cabinet, possibly even over his objections, with the matter of authority left for Congress to decide. (I wrote a novel a few years ago about usurpation under the 25th Amendment, and suddenly the prospect scems less remote.) The Reagan staff had a brush with the need to consider Section 4 after his shooting, and responded wrongly by not even considering the matter in formal cabinet session. One would think that previous failure in that particular case would have readied them for proper response in "the instant one." But President Reagan was ready only to be ambivalent, obeying the law while pretending that he did not have to. He confused yesterday's executive prerogative with today's constitutional requirement.

Before undergoing a major operation, a conscious president should declare his vice president to be the acting president. When the elected this operation content to the second constitution of the elected of the of t chief executive comes to, he can reassume power by invoking the immortal words of the Reagan Precedent: "Gimme that pen."

Plants have fed the world and cured its ills since life began.

Now we're destroying their principal habitat at the rate of 50 acres every minute.

We live on this planet by courtesy of the earth's green cover. Plants protect fragile soils from erosion, regulate the atmosphere, maintain water supplies for agriculture and prevent formation of deserts. Without plants man could not survive.

Yet, knowing this, we are destroying our own life-support system at such an alarming rate that it has already become a crisis - a crisis for ourselves and an even bigger one for our children.

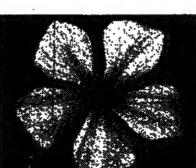

The figures alone should tell the story - we destroy a tropical rain forest three times the size of Switzerland every year, within 25 years only fragments of the vast Malaysian and Indonesian forests will remain.

Dr. Richard Eoans Schultes, director of the tanical Museum at Haroard University, has spent 13 years in the Amazon jungle collecting the 'magic' plants of myth and legend and making them available to Western medicine and science. "The drugs of the future," he says, grow in the primeval jungle."

What we are destroying Much of the food, medicines and materials we use every day of our lives is derived from the wild species which grow in the tropics. Yet only a tiny haction of the world's flowering plants have been studied for possible use. Homifyingly, some 25,000 of all flowering species are on the verge of extinction

Once the plants go, they are gone forever. Once the forests go only wastelands remain.

There is no villain - except ignorance and short-sightedness. The desperately poor people who live in the forests have to clear areas for crops and fuel, but they are doing this in such a way that they are destroying their very livelihood.

Add to this the way in which the heart is being ripped out of the forests to meet the demand for tropical timbers and we have a recipe for disaster.

On Trek With Afghans: Rebels Slip by Soviet Posts

By Arthur Bonner New York Times Service

SHULGARA, Afghanistan The trails leading north from Pakistan into Afghanistan are alive with men, bedecked with Korans and cartridge belts, and with mules, donkeys and camels piled high with weapons and ammunition.

They meet other men, unarmed and in groups from 30 to 100 or more, moving south to receive training and pick up supplies for what the Afghans describe as a jihad against the Soviet Union, which sent troops into Afghanistan

"If you hear a MiG, guide your horse into the shade of some tree or rock. If you hear a helicopter, jump off, forget the horse and get under a rock," a rebel leader told a foreign reporter as he set out with 115 men, two horses, two mules, and six donkeys on a trek with newly acquired weapons from Pakistan. The destination was Shulgara, a district center just 60 miles (96 kilometers) south of the Soviet border.

Not once during the 23-day trek to Shulgara, however, did the col-umn come under attack by Soviet planes or helicopters.

The trek began on a sour note a complaint about the quality of guns that had been given to them. "We have better weapons cap-tured from the Russians," said the groups of 20 to 25 men.

Once the column entered the central mountainous area known as the Hazarajat, a new danger ap-peared. The region, vaguely defined, covers all or parts of five or six provinces and is inhabited mainly by the Hazara, a Persianspeaking people who are said to descend from the Mongol armies of Genghis Khan. They are estimated to total 800,000 to 1.5 million.

Their faith is one of the things that distinguishes them. While most Afghan Moslems adhere to the Sunni branch, the Hazara are Shiites, like most Iranians.

Each time Abdul Sadiq, the commander, had to persuade them to drop their demands. Usually a close look at so many well-armed men in the bus was persnasion enough, but if a Hazara roadblock commander began a long ideologi-cal discussion the delay could extend to more than an hour. As the mountains of the Hazara-

Khmer Rouge Hint Readiness To Stay Out of a Peace Regime

BANGKOK - The Khmer Rouge, the Communist group in the three-faction Cambodian guerrilla coalition, hinted for the first time Monday that it could accept being left out of a future Cambodian government if the war against the Vietnamese-backed government, now six and a half years old, could be ended peacefully.

The strongest of the three guerrilla groups, the Khmer Rouge, headed by Pol Pot, proposed a nationalist coalition to be led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk. It could include the pro-Hanoi Heng Samrin government now in Phnom Penh, according to a statement by the Khmer Ronge radio.

Diplomats here said it was the first time that the Khmer Rouge had called for inclusion of Heng Samrin officials in a coalition. "In the future we still have the firm purpose to have the prince as our president," the radio said. "We welcome all nationalists to join with us, even if they have served Vietnam in the past — if they stop serving Vietnam. This will include the Heng Samrin party."

The Khmer Rouge forces ruled Cambodia from 1975 to 1979, when they were deposed by the Vietnamese Army.

Speaking American and talking about money is not BCBG. Neither are pastel-pink Cadillacs, the Champs-Elysées on a Saturday afternoon, spending one's vacation at a Club Med resort, or wearing jogging suits and loud colors.

Other key chapters deal with schools, weddings, receptions, honcymoons, decoration, good manners, professions, sports, vacations and culture. No snob stone is left unturned. One learns, for instance, that BCBG first names include Agathe, Albane, Florence, Isabelle and Hortense, while the no-no list runs to Odette, Paulette, Armande and Gisèle. Children must be baptized before they are 3 months old so that they can fit into the heir-

BCBG children are high on sports and Scouting. This will presumably save them from jeans, chewing gum and television. Piano lessons are recommended. So are dancing and tennis lessons, hockey, and pony rides, Although England was once fashionable for summer vacations, BCBGs now prefer the United States, with California and Texas at the top of the list.

BCBG teen-agers' lives are also wrapped up in so-called Rallyer— groups organized by aggressive mothers who tie up their children's erations. They work in Paris but are very much part of their village, and uptight gatherings, such as teaparties and dances.

No matter how late a BCBG goes to bed on Saturday night, he has to go to church Sunday morning.

When wedding bells start ringing, BCBGs must keep track of all kinds of musts, including flowers, wedding lists and wedding rings. Young BCBG couples decorate their houses themselves - "Otherwise, one runs the risk of resembling a theater set." Heirlooms such as a Louis XV commode are recommended. So are fireplaces, parquet floors and chintz curtains but these last should never match the settees. For those who have courageous ly read the book until the end, there is a test showing whether one is BCBG. Among the questions: "What does the number 52 mean to

FUTURES AND OPTIONS

Foreign-Currency Market Shows Big Price Increases

By H.J. MAIDENBERG

New York Times Service EW YORK - Rarely has a major trend in futures prices been so clearly determined by fundamental, technical, and human factors as those in the foreign-currency markets. Because these three are the major influences in all futures markets, it came as no surprise last week when all key foreign-currency futures posted strong gains.

The spot September British pound futures, for instance, jumped 6 cents last week, to $1.3795; West German marks, 1.37 cents, to 34.90; Swiss francs, 1.92 cents, to 42.03; and it took 240 Japanese yen, in currency unit terms, to buy a dollar, compared terest rates," said Alan C. Leventen, president of Twenty-First Futures, a division of Twenty-First Securi-ties Corp. "And this factor has been telegraphed to the market daily for the past month."

Indeed, with Treasury bill rates down to about 7 percent on an annual basis and inflation at 4.5 percent, the real return on short-term domestic instruments was 2.5 percent last week, compared with about 6.5 percent on some glitter to ECAUSE real returns on West German short-term instruments are similar to those on Treasury bills, investors therealso moved into sterling. Meanwhile, other foreign-exchange specialists noted that Japanese financial institutions, which had been major buyers of Treasury paper, also began moving some of their huge dollar holdings into sterling.

"Another fundamental fact of the currency market is that speculators as well as dealers are far less interested in economics than in the situation at the moment," Mr. Leventen said. "Unlike other commodities, no one stores any currency in the hope of future appreciation. The dollar, for instance, is constantly measured against other currency stores of value. Because foreign exchange transactions involve huge sums, even a tiny change in values can result in large losses as well as gains."

Although the dollar has been declining against major foreign currencies since late February, he continued, many dealers and speculators were extremely cautious about taking large positions against it. They waited until they were convinced that the Federal Reserve Board was determined to stimulate the economy by depressing short-term interest rates, the only area of the money market where the central bank can effectively influence rates. This caution was well justified because foreign-exchange traders have been burned repeatedly in recent years by what turned out to be temporary declines in the dollar's value, he explained. "As for the technical factors that confirmed the dollar's downward move during the last few weeks was the positive chart figures," Mr. Leventen said. "For example, by drawing a line touching the tops of the British pound since it began rising from its low of $1.02 late last February and another touching the lows since then, the chartists determined that $1.33 would be the major break-out point. Thus, when the pound broke through $1.33, the technical signal was buy."

When similar chart resistance points were broken early last week on the mark, yen, and Swiss franc, it further convinced traders who follow technical strategies that a major trend was finally taking place. "How long this view will dominate the market depends of course on real rates of return on short-term dollar instruments," the president of Twenty-First Futures said. "Those who were selling foreign currencies last week cannot all be described as having the herd instinct, although nowhere is this basic human factor so pronounced as in the currencies market."

Meanwhile, the decline in the dollar in recent weeks also served restore some glitter to the gold market. Normally, gold benefits (Continued on Page 17, Col. 1)

U.S. Cuts Business Stockpiles

Fall of 0.4% Is Most Since '83

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches WASHINGTON - U.S. business inventories fell 0.4 percent in May, the steepest decline in more than two years, the government reported Monday.

The Commerce Department said business stockpiles on shelves and in backlots totaled $577.9 billion in May, compared to an April total of $580.2 billion.

It was the largest decline since a 0.6-percent drop in March 1983.

The May decline came as businesses saw sales rise a slight 0.2 percent, far below the 1.4-percent rise in April.

The overall economy has been sluggish for the last year with part of the weak activity attributed to a ildup of unwanted inventories. The sharp decline in May could be an indication that businesses are getting their inventory levels under

The Census Bureau said that the decline in business investories was a positive sign for the industrial economy that has been starving for new orders.

Increases in inventories in the past have discouraged new orders, especially when the gains occurred even when sales increased.

When inventories are balanced with demand, the same amount moves in the back door, on to shelves and into storage, as moves out the front door with customers. Now, during a period of weak sales, buyers are being especially careful not to build up excess inventories. Analysts tended to reject the idea that the May drop may be the start of an "inventory correction," a drastic cutback that can by itself precipitate a recession.

U.K. Agency Acquires Wide Range of Firms

By Sandra Salmans

New York Times Service
LONDON — Its no-holds-barred advertising campaign for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher created a national furor in Britain in 1979. Its 90second science-liction spot for British Airways — showing the entire island of Manhattan coming in for a landing at Heathrow Airport — was one of the most talked-about commercials of

But in the past year, probably nothing that Saatchi & Saatchi Co. has done for its clients has been as provocative as what it is doing on its own behalf. The big advertising agency has been on a trans-Atlantic shopping spree, buying up advertising and public relations agencies and even a management consulting firm in the United States.

"They're collectors," said Jer-emy Bullmore, chairman of J. Walter Thompson's London agency, which Saatchi & Saatchi overtook in billings in 1979. They collect companies, clients, money, pictures, everything. They vastly enjoy growth and

Maurice Saatchi, the company's chairman and one of the two brothers who founded it 15 years ago, prefers a different analogy. On the admittedly more modest scale of the advertising industry, he said, "we don't see why we should be any different than Reynolds and Nabisco"—a reference to the merger earlier this year of the two consumer-goods

Saatchi & Saatchi has become the biggest advertising agency in Europe and the fifth largest worldwide. With international it's economics," Mr. Saatchi worldwide. With international billings of $2.3 billion last year, according to Advertising Age, it still trails Interpublic Group Cos., the holding company that includes McCann Erickson and had billings of about $4.2 billion. But Saatchi is gaining fast, "We expect to see Saatchi continuing its remorseless climb up the world billings chart," said Bill Seward of Phillips & Drew, a London brokerage house.

Some critics suggest that Saatchi & Saatchi is spreading itself too thin, but the company insists there is a method to its merger madness. In its annual reports, Saatchi for years has expounded the theory of global advertising: How the same advertising strategy and agency would ultimately be used by a multinational concern to represent its products ev-erywhere. Recently the agency began extending that concept to all business services. Its idea:

Saatchi's network of advertising agencies has retained the flair for creativity that first put Saat-chi on the map. While there is no distinctive Saatchi style, and while some of its campaigns are frankly hard-sell, it continues to snap up creative awards. In 1983-84, its British agency won twice as many top awards in Britain as all the other major multinational agencies put to-

But while they are proud of that record, Maurice Saatchi, 39, and his brother Charles, 42, take pains to emphasize that advertis-ing is a business like any other, and should be managed accordingly. "It's always been our goal to build a large multinational agency and keep winning awards," said Maurice Saatchi. "You can't do that with unpro-

IBM Profit Fell 13% in Quarter To $1.41 Billion

NEW YORK - International Business Machines Corp. reported Monday that profit fell 13 percent in the second quarter from a year earlier, roughly in line with the forecasts of securities analysts.

The company's second-quarter earnings fell to $1.41 billion, or $2.30 a share, from $1.62 billion, or 52.50 a share, a year earlier. Sales rose marginally to $11.4 billion from $11.2 billion.

For the half, profit was $2.40 billion, or $3.91 a share, down

Levi Strauss President Makes Buyout Offer

SAN FRANCISCO — Levi Strauss Co. announced Monday that its president, Robert Haas, and other members of the family that founded the famous maker of jeans would offer $50 dollars a share in cash to return the company to private ownership.

Mr. Hass said the group was making the proposal "to better enable management to focus attention on the long-term interests of

Eastern Reported Seeking Unions' Aid in TWA Bid

MIAMI - Eastern Airlines. which last month ruled out an acquisition of Trans World Airlines Inc., now is seeking the help of TWA's labor unions in a revived bid to take over the carrier, according to union sources. Over the weekend, a team of top Eastern executives met with Eastern and TWA labor leaders in New York to discuss a possi-ble buyout offer, union officials close to the negotiations said Sunday. There was no word on the outcome,

An Eastern spokeswoman refused to confirm or deny that the meeting had taken place, and TWA officials were not available for comment,

Eastern has renewed its study of a TWA takeover less than a of a TWA takeover less than a month after TWA accepted a $793.5-million buyout offer from Texas Air Corp., the Houston-based parent of Continental Airlines. A coalition of TWA'S unions, however, has wowed to fight the agreement, fearing cost-cutting measures directed against the union.

Union sources said Eastern

Union sources said Eastern, with two union leaders on its board and workers holding more than 20 percent of the its stock, was regarded as a much a more attractive candidate.

The move follows a decline in the fortunes of the world's largest clothing manufacturer, which went public in 1971 about 120 years after it was founded by Levi Strauss.

Following a fashion swing away from its jeans and casual clothes, Levi Strauss's net income fell from a high of $224 million in 1980 to $41 million last year.

Its share price slipped from its 1983 high above $50 to $24 last year before recovering to the 30s. Reports of the buyout have sent the price into the mid-40s.

A company statement said the family group had obtained commitments for more than $2 billion of financing in debt and equity to complete the transaction.

The proposal was submitted by HHF Corp., a newly formed con-pany backed by family members who control about 36 percent of outstanding shares. Remaining family members and trusts, who control an additional 4 percent of the shares, were expected to sup-port the proposal, the statement

The company statement said HFIF is being advised by Friedman Hellman, a San Francisco investment banking firm.

It said Wells Pargo Bank NA has agreed to organize and participate in a bank syndication that will pro-vide $1.45 Billion to finance the acquisition and an additional $250 million of working capital.
Salomon Brothers Inc. has agreed to underwrite $300 million of subordinated debt which will be used to retire the same amount of bank debt after completion of the financing.

The balance of the financing will be supplied by the family group which has agreed to provide about 7 million shares of their current holdings in the company, the annonncement added.

The family group also has a $300 million line of credit available to enable it to purchase shares. It said while the group intends to purchase Levi's common stock under the terms of a merger agreement still to be negotiated, it has also reserved the right to take all action necessary to prevent a third party from gaining control of the company.

Chase Earnings Climb 45%; J.P. Morgan Has 51.8% Rise

NEW YORK — Chase Manhattan Corp. reported on Monday that earnings rose 45 percent in the second quarter while J.P. Morgan &

Co. said profit increased 51.8-percent in the period.

Chase earned $131 million, or $2.88 a share in the quarter, up from $90 million, or $2.21 a share in the year-earlier period. The per-share income reflects a preferred offering issued in connection with the purchase of Lincoln First Banks and a higher number of common

Morgan earned $157.4 million, or $1,75 a share in the second quarter, up from $103.7 million, or $1.16 a year earlier.

Chase, whose principal subsidiary is the third largest U.S. bank, said its $13-million share of $570 million in interest payments received from Argentina were included in interest income. But the company put the payment in its $105-million provision for possible Mongan, the holding company for Mongan Greatmay Trust, ranked No. 5 in size and one of the most conservative of large U.S. banks, said it deferred $18.6 million in Argentine interest payments.

Morgan said the payments are listed as "other liabilities" until Argentina's refinancing package has been completed. The bank said the decision conforms with guidelines issued by regulators on the Argentina payments.

Morgan also took a $35-million loss from the dumping of $70-million of reduced-rate renegotiated loans. The bank did not disclose which loans were sold, but some market sources indicated they were not Latin American ones. In addition, Morgan doubled its provision for loan losses to $90 million from $45 last year reflecting "management's concern about the meven economic recovery both in the United States and abroad."

Both Chase and Morgan had good gains in trading profits, but basic banking business, wider interest spread and other fees, also contributed heavily to the results of both institutions.

Morgan's $45.6-million gain in foreign-exchange profits compared with losses of $12.9 million a year ago.

Cheer raised its primary carried to 6.65 percent on lune 30, 1985.

Chase raised its primary capital to 6.65 percent on June 30, 1985 from 5.73 percent a year earlier. Morgan's primary capital stood at 7.63 percent on the same date compared with 7.43 percent a year earlier.

Primary capital is common stockholders' equity, perpetual pre-ferred stock, mandatory convertible securities and the reserve for possible loan losses.

Morgan makes markets, and makes them work for international investors utional investors actively managing port- related elements that affect fine

Institutional investors actively managing portfolios of international securities expect a lot from a dealing counterparty. They get a lot at The Morgan Bank.

Customized service. Morgan does more than just buy and sell securities. We're interested in developing and maintaining long-term client relationships. We listen to your particular objectives, and then we help you achieve them with new ideas, careful analysis, and customized service.

Secondary market strength. Morgan is known for successful Eurobond issues. But our strength in structuring issues that sell is based on a deep involvement in secondary markets. No bank knows more about the interrelated elements that affect financial markets—interest rates, currency fluctuations, capital flows. Our dealers exchange vital information around the clock so we can give our clients timely and accurate financial market updates.

A wide range of products. Our clients look to Morgan for Eurodollar bonds and U.S. Treasuries, but we also give them much more. We make markets in non-dollar-denominated Eurobonds and government securities, floating-rate and short-term notes, CDs, currency options, and warrants. Through Morgan Futures Corporation we act as a broker for financial futures. And Morgan is active as a principal in securities markets in Amsterdam, Frankfurt, Zurich, Paris, London, and New York:

Morgan professionalism. When you work with Morgan you get over 100 years of international financial experience—and the strength of a bank with nearly $5 billion in primary capital. You get a network of sales and trading specialists that stretches around the world. And you get the highest level of skill and professionalism.

Talk to Morgan about how we can meet your international securities investment and trading requirements. Contact Mark Hausberg for Eurobonds, or Nabil Sawabini for U.S. Treasuries.

Value of Output Up 23% in China

BEIJING — The value of China's industrial output rose 23.1 percent in the first six months of 1985 against 11.6 percent in the corresponding period of 1984, the state statistical bureau said.

A spokesman quoted on Sunday by the official China News Service said the growth this year was too rapid and could harm China's pro-gram of economic reforms by fuel-

Argentine Reforms' Mixed Reviews

BUENOS AIRES - One month after the Argentine government took Draconian measures to stem inflation running at 1,000 percent a year, officials say they are happy with the results so far, but some has reported a sharp decline in debusinessmen and bankers dispute the analysis.

Interior Minister Antonio Troccoli said, "In general terms, there is no fall in production, or any alarming increase in firings or unemployment. Everything is going reasonably well, except for some obstacles ended without any major incidents best possible way."

Swedish Group Plans to Issue Euroyen Bond Reuters

TOKYO - AB Svensk Ex-portkredit, the Swedish export credit concern, plans to issue the first Euroyen zero-coupon bond later this month through a syndicate led by Nikko Securities (Europe) Lid., securities in-dustry sources said Monday.

The Swedish concern plans to raise about 10 billion yen with five-year and two-month bond issues, but other details are not yet available, they said. Separately, China International Trust & Investment Corp., China's main nonbank funding agency, is planning to raise 300 million Hong Kong dollars with a five-year bond issue here, a CITIC spokesman Chase Manhattan Asia Ltd. has been awarded the mandate to arrange the fixed-rate issue, and the bonds will be issued at 99.90 percent with a coupon of 9% percent. Denominations are in 500,000 dollars.

The issue, which matures on August 1, 1990, is the first Euro-Hong Kong dollar issue ever launched, and is being aimed at European investors, the spokesman said. A management group of some 12 to 14 managers is being formed, he added.

WORDS THAT MUST SOMEHOW BE SAID: Selected Essays of Kay Boyle, 1927-1984

Edited and with an Introduction by Elizabeth S. Bell. 262 pages. $16.50. North Point Press, 850 Talbot Avenue.

Reviewed by Robert W. Smith

Berkeley, Calif. 94706.

GURELY no greater reward is offered to 3 writer than the knowledge that other men are reading the words that he has, by some miracle, retrieved from the depths of his own silence; the knowledge that other men are actually listening for the sound of his voice to call out from the page to them, and, above all, the knowledge that they believe the words they hear." — Kay Boyle.

Few Americans have written so beautifully of the human condition with love and courage as Kay Boyle. This collection of 25 essays, reviews and memoirs spanning more than 50 years wonderfully catches her career as a writer and social activist.

Boyle has written more than 30 volumes: the memoir "Being Geniuses Together" (1968), with Robert McAlmon, perhaps the best portrait of Paris in the 1920s; superb short stories that have carned her critical praise and honors (Katherine Anne Porter wrete that Boyle's "The Crazy Hunter" was the story "closest to perfection" that she had ever readly nevels ranging from "Plagued by the Nightingale" (1931) to "The Underground Woman" (1975). and - her favorite form of artistic expression —the poetry of "Glad Day" (1938) and "Collected Poems" (1962).

Now, happily, we have essays, gathered across a lifetime, that show where Boyle has lived and what she has loved in her life. She knew many of the world's unportant writers, a familiarity that produces evocative prose. She is exceptionally good on down-and-outers and misfits such as E. Carnevali, dying bravely of life and sleeping sackness, killing the promise of a new literature that William Carlos Williams saw in him; Katherine Mansfield, unable to connect with the life outside; and Edward Dahlberg, author of the minor classic "Because Was Flesh," for whom a book is "a battle of the soul and not a war of words."

In her praise for Williams's "In the American Grain" (1927) for refusing to romanticize the American experience, Boyle evinces an abiding love for the vitality and grandour of America - but a deeper love for truth. As a child she was lucky to have a mother "exactly my age" who offset a domineering grandla-ther's statements with revelations, one who championed literary causes ranging from Joyce's then controversial "Ulysses" to Boyle's early writing.

These selections show a heart and head at work. In the preface to "The Smoking Mountain" she writes of H. Baab, a small-time Eichmann indicted in 1950 for indirect involvement in 56 murders. In other selections, she writes of trying to block cops from a campus during the 1968 disorders, telling them, "This campus belongs to the faculty and students, not to the police": of spending 21 days in prison for sitting down in a doorway of the Oakland draft center; of joining the American Indian encampment on Alcatraz in 1970.

Had Paule trackled to the establishment and

Had Boyle truckled to the establishment and not made waves, her literary reputation doubt-less would have been enhanced. But she is too busy to care about that.

Robert W. Smith, a Washington writer, wrotethis review for The Washington Post.

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatch ANAHEIM, California - The home team had a guardian angel in the stands, ready to commit a little larceny to make sure Brian Downing's home run remained just that. With the score tied at 3 and with a runner on base and two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning here Sunday, Downing lined a shot to-ward the left-field corner, Toronto's George Bell made the catch as he fell over a railing into the seats, but when he pulled himself back on the field, the ball was missing Third-base umpire John Shulock, who hustled down the line to make the call, signaled home run and the Angels were 5-3 winners.

Blue Jay Manager Bobby Cox and several players pleaded at length that a fan had grabbed the ball out of Bell's glove, but Shulock stood firm. "When Bell made the catch, he had broken the plane of the fence, which takes him out of the ballpark," said Shulock. "If he catches it on the field and his momentum takes him in the stands and someone takes the ball away from him, that's a different situation. My only concern was where he made the catch. He was in the fans' area. The rule says that he must come out with the ball. Otherwise, it's a homer."

"He sure as hell has to come out of the stands with the ball," said California Manager Gene Mauch. "He's fair game when he goes into the stands.

Toronto and reliever Gary Lavelle (who also was a ninth-inning loser Saturday night) had taken a 3-2 lead into the minth, but Bobby Grich's run-scoring single tied the game and set up its bizarre finish. SPRINGFIELD, New Jersey

- The final-round pressure of Clark chipped short and twoputted for a bogey, and Baker was given an easy walk up Nos. 17 and 18.

Lopez, who was one shot behind Baker going into Sunday's play, had five bogeys and no birdies in her final-round 77.

She finished with an even-par 288 to tie Janet Coles (76) for fourth place. Vicki Alvarez closed with 75/287 for third.

N. Zealand Rugby Union Cancels Tour WELLINGTON, New Zealand (Combined Dispatches) - The New Zealand rugby union announced Monday that it would abandon a tour of South Africa by the national All Blacks team. The 16-match, nine-week tour was scheduled to begin Wednesday. The union's announcement came two days after Judge Maurice Casey ruled the team could not leave until a challenge to the tour's validity had been heard by the High Court. Union counsel Douglas White said the interim injunction would not be challenged. "A major factor in not appealing was the scale of the security operation needed in New Zealand to facilitate a departure of the team to operation needed in New Zealand to facilitate a departure of the team to South Africa," White said on Monday.

Opposition lawyers claimed the tour would violate the union's constitutional aim of promoting, fostering and developing rugby. The tour had been opposed by the government, the churches and a majority of New Zealanders, according to public-opinion polls, because it was viewed as being supportive of South Africa's racial-separation policies. Prime Minister David Lange had said recently that the tour would make New Years of the symptosis. Zealand "part of the armory of apartheid."

McCrory Keeps Title on 3d-Round KO

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Milton McCrory of the United States successfully defended his World Boxing Council welterweight title with a third-round knockout of Panamanian Carlos Trujillo in a scheduled 12-

Morris Katz, Master of the Fast Draw

New York Times Service

LOCH SHELDRAKE New York — There is a legend in these hills of a man who can paint a landscape in less than two minutes and frame it in eight seconds flat.

"And the heck of it is, it's true!" said Roberta Liebling who made the pilgrimage from New York to Brown's Hotel in the Catskills to witness the legendary Morris

Katz performing the miracle.

I have heard," chimed in her companion, Ruth Simons, "that he once painted a landscape in the dark."

How did it look, Katz was asked. "A guy bought it," he answered.

The women watched with about 100 others in the lobby as Katz "schmeered," to use his expression, a landscape on a 20-by-24-inch (51-by-61-centimeter) canvas in 1 minute 46.5 seconds, shattering the 2-minute barrier, if not breaking his own world record of 90

Katz invented "Instant Art" in 1956 and has gone on to become the most prolific painter alive, according to the Guinness Book of Records, with about 143,000 paintings to his credit.

He said he perfected his technique by doing 6,000 paintings at something of an art factory in Mississippi. Katz does not use brushes because they are "too slow and hard to clean." He paints with a palette knife and lots of toilet paper. "What miracles I can do," he said. "with a full roll of toilet paper and a good head of steam."

In the summer of 1985, Morris Katz is closing fast on Pablo Picasso's record of 147,800 works of art. He could break it this year, barring injuries.

Katz, 63, a Polish immigrant, rises at dawn at his home in New York City, in the Bronx, and does his daily exercises, which he says he needs to stay strong enough to carry loads of paints and frames and loads on up his 18 hours. paints and frames and to keep up his 18-hour days. He is a burly man with an easy smile and with long, wiry salt-and-pepper hair, which he tucks under a green beret. He wears paint-splattered pants and T-shirts that read "Morris Katz — World's Most Prolific Art-

In his Greenwich Village studio, with an electric fan behind him to hasten drying of the oil paint, he knocked off three landscapes, framed them and tied them together with a rope in 10 minutes, like some rodeo event. "There!" he exclaimed "Put those on a gallery wall on Madison Avenue, under a spotlight, with a refined woman saying so-phisticated things about them, and they'd sell for $3,000 apiece."

The studio looks like an art-supply warehouse. He buys his oil and acrylic paints not by the tube but by the gallon, his frames by the hundreds and his canvases by the thousands. He spends $1,000 a year on staples to affix canvas to frame. He wears out palette knives. He is thinking of coming out with longer, faster, tougher palette knives bearing his autograph.

Also in the studio are videotapes of him on television and copies of his new book, "Paint Good & Fast," which tells busy people how to paint masterpieces in minutes, just as Katz contends Picasso and Monet did. "Life goes faster and faster," he writes.

"The fine arts must keep pace. This art will one day be viewed as prophetic." His is the true modern art, he says: "fast, democratic and to the point."

He recently loaded his tired van, with 160,000 miles on it, and drove to work the Catskills resorts - the lobby of Brown's in the morning, the Pines in the afternoon and Kutsher's at night. He did not expect to be home until after 1 A.M.

"Oh my God!" said Bobby Brachman of New York as Katz executed two clown paintings at the same time in Brown's lobby, then completed three seascapes in less than five minutes. He was asking up to $200 for his paintings but usually settled for less than $50.

The prices are low, "said Katz, who keeps up a repartee in English and Yiddish with his diences while he paints, "because I want to sell my paintings now, not when I'm dead. Some painters waited 500 years to sell their work. Some are still waiting - on tables, in the dining room."

"You're beautiful, Morris Katz," said Elaine Finkelstein of Cambridge, Massachusetts. "You bring art to the lay people."

In his studio, Katz, who said he trained in Europe and at the Art Students League of New York, has painted some portraits, each epresenting months of detailed brush work. He went broke doing this kind of work in 1969, "so I put on a beret, came to the Catskills to do these little shows, where I paint to order and play the fool." His idea was to make enough to buy some time to do fine art work, "but I cannot seem to ever get enough ahead.

He did not break his world record of 90 seconds (98 seconds, framed) at Brown's on this day, but his 1:46.5 for a landscape complete with mountains, a river, trees with leaves, a house, birds and not one but two human figures was a feat that stunned the

Katz has a dazzling finish, whipping the painting from easel to frame and holding it high over his head while stapling it with one of several loaded staple guns he keeps at the

Max Goldstein of Norfolk, Virginia, took a photograph of the painting and said, "Wait until they see this back home."

"What's the title of that last one?" some-That's entitled, 'My Home in Poland,'

Katz answered "I'll bet it is," someone else yelled mockingly. "And I suppose that's you by the river holding hands with your daddy."

> Emperor Hirohite, the world's longest-reigning monarch, has set a record for age among Japan's 124known rulers, the Imperial Household Agency says. The frail, bespeciacied sovereign, who turned 54 in April, has now lived longer than Emperor Comizunoo, Japan's 108th emperor, who was born in 1596 and died at the august age of 84 years and three months, the agency said. Next in longevity was the 57th emperor. Yozei (866-949), who lived 80 years and 10 months. Hirohito became emperor in 1926.
